It's time to to take action for the earth...

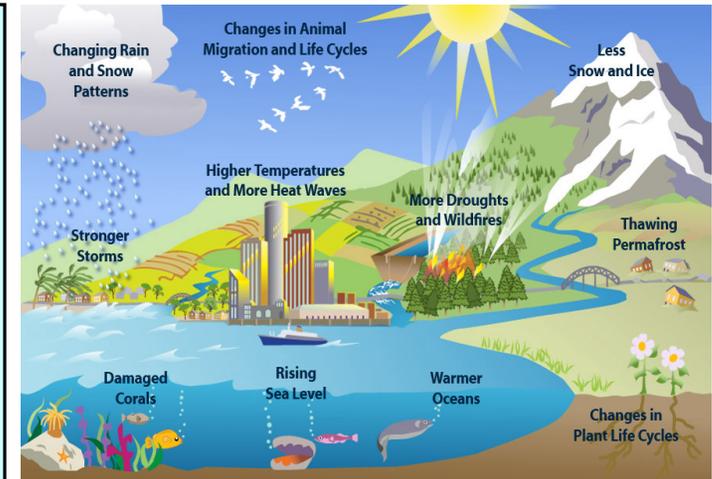

Basic Science of Climate Change. There are three basic facts you need to know about climate change and humanity's role in it:

1. Carbon dioxide (CO₂), a byproduct of burning carbon-based fuels, traps heat. We have known this to be true for over 150 years (since 1859), since Irish scientist John Tyndall stuck some CO₂ in a tube, shone some light through it, and found that the temperature rose higher when there was more CO₂ [1, 2].
2. The Concentration of CO₂ is Rising. The second point we've been seeing thanks to the direct measurements of the Keeling Curve, which now records 400 ppm of CO₂ in the atmosphere, up from 317 in 1958 when measurements began [3, 4].
3. We've burned 2x as many fossil fuels as needed to account for the observed rise. (The rest has gone into the ocean and is causing ocean acidification). . The third we know because of oil, coal, and gas company accountants. They record how much they sell, and if you assume all that they sell is burned (a good assumption), you end up with enough fossil CO₂ in the atmosphere to double the rise we've seen [5, 6].

These three facts are so obvious that they were apparent as early as 1895, when Chemist Svante Arrhenius became the first to predict rising temperature due to human additions of CO₂ to the atmosphere [7].

Come listen to those speaking for the earth...

Pecha Kucha Springfield provides quarterly events where local speakers present 20 images for 20 seconds each on various topics. Pecha Kucha is an international organization with over 800 cities participating worldwide. In Springfield, the Westcott Center for Architecture and Design hosts these fun evenings in partnership with local organizations.

(Left) Frank Lloyd Wright championed a form of organic architecture. The Westcott Center for Architecture and Design in Springfield continues in his tradition, moving the “Solar House” to their property in 2014. Top right; Pecha Kucha logo. Center Right, audience packs into Westcott House for Pecha Kucha. Bottom Right: Pecha Kucha moves out into the community to the State Theater to accommodate the crowds that come to these popular events.
